

THE BIG CALGARY STAMPEDE, JULY 11 to 16

The Calgary Exhibition and Stampede will be held this year on July 11th to 16th, and will include the most outstanding programme ever engaged for Calgary's annual celebration. It will require all available space on the Exhibition grounds to house exhibits.

The Stampede will once more bring to the city the most outstanding of the annual events, and approximately twenty districts will be represented in the chuck wagon race.

The week's celebration will open on Friday at 10 o'clock Monday morning, which each year is enjoyed by between fifty and sixty thousand people. Judging of the week will be done on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and on Friday morning the live stock review will be staged in front of the grand stand. Last year between thirteen and fourteen thousand people packed the grandstand and on change to witness this year's review. This year Burns & Co. Ltd. are presenting a Dartmoor pony from the Prince of Wales' ranch, the North Star Old English, a Shetland pony and the Ontario laundry is presenting two dogs, to girls and boys under 16 years of age who attend the review. Free tickets of admission will be distributed to them in the various schools during a radius of fifty miles of Calgary, and any teacher outside that area may obtain tickets for school boys and girls at that age by writing to the Exhibition manager.

The grandstand performance includes a wonderful production called "Canada Marching", which will be participated in by about 150 artists and which includes some of the best vaudeville features ever engaged for the Calgary Fair.

The running race programme will this year be for seven days commencing on Saturday afternoon, July 23rd, before the Exhibition opens.

The week's features include morning steeple chases on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings, the Cowboy and Old Timers Bill Friday night, one of the greatest fireworks programmes ever given on Saturday night.

Special passenger fares of fare and a quarter will be in force from Alberta, Saskatchewan and the British Columbia mainland points. A free accommodation booth will be located in front of the C. P. B. Station, where hotel or private rooms may be obtained.

PROPOSAL SUGGESTED TO AMALGAMATE MUNICIPALITIES

Elimination of the present system of small municipal districts in the Province, and the creation in its place of a system of "enlarged municipal areas," under which the 146 municipal districts now in operation, together with some 143 improvement districts now administered by the provincial government, would be amalgamated into some 50 "enlarged areas," thereby eliminating a large part of the cost of government, both provincial and municipal, while increasing efficiency of administration, is proposed in a plan announced last week by Premier J. E. Brownlee. A saving in municipal administrative costs alone of over one million dollars is estimated, while the saving in provincial administrative costs of all public services will run into very large figures.

The proposal, which has already been presented to the cabinet, and is now presented to the public by the Premier, is the result of two years of rather exhaustive study and survey of the province conducted by an official sub-committee of Municipal Affairs. The plan is entirely different from any scheme of municipal reorganization in existence in Canada or the United States, and is simply the application of the principles of our present small municipal unit to the larger area and continues the existing idea of only one authority for municipal administrative and taxing purposes.

The plan as so far developed will, in accordance with a resolution of the last convention of the municipal districts association, be discussed further with the executive of that organization who have already been in consultation with the departmental officials in its preparation. It will then be submitted to the next convention of the provincial legislature. As a basis for discussion only, the plan has been prepared setting out a plan of consolidation which appears to be the most logical and the most desirable, but the map will, of course, be subject to adjustment, both as to the number of enlarged areas and as to the boundaries, as a result of further discussion. The new districts would be set up in accordance with certain fundamental principles, more or less as follows:

Grouping of localities having a common interest, and being of the same size, and having a geographical concentration, as far as possible.

Maintenance of the municipal boundaries such as rivers might more advantageously be used.

Existence of sufficient population and assessable property so that each unit could function economically.

Consideration of the accessibility of the administrative centre.

Government of the units would be much the same as the government of the present municipal districts. There would be a council of six or eight members, or six or eight wards or electoral districts established in the enlarged municipalities, and the council would be elected by the voters of the council area, rather than by appointment by the provincial government of the council as at present.

Premier Brownlee, in discussing the new plan, points out that the scheme is not a radical one, but a view not only of the urgent necessity for reducing the general cost of government wherever justified, but also in view of the fact that with the vastly improved facilities of transportation and communication of the present day, enlarged areas are in reality more easily administered than were the smaller units under the conditions which existed under the present system was created.

One of the great benefits of the scheme would be the large economies in the cost of administration, both provincial and municipal, already referred to.

Other advantages of the plan would be the greater equality of the tax burden.

A more uniform and more equitable assessment of the lands in the area, since the judgement of the assessor would be applied over a larger area.

More uniform school fees, and a saving in the administrative costs of education.

The amalgamation system of government, the enlargement of the municipal areas making it possible to bring the roads into alignment with the other districts and with the general provincial highway plan.

The plan, if adopted, would present more the opportunity for a review of the whole field of taxation as between the municipalities and the provincial government. The possibility is suggested that the provincial government would abandon the field of real property taxation and leave it to the municipalities, urban as well as rural.

Manual training to be taught by the boys by local men, such as carpenters, blacksmiths, shoe and leather repairing, upholstering, and in fact many of the trades, so that the boys may be able to do things around the home and in the home and actually use the knowledge and square in constructing or helping their fathers to construct buildings on the farm or about the home.

Gardening and agriculture generally to be taught by the boys and girls.

NICKNAMES IN BASEBALL

New York—Nicknames are as much a part of baseball as the ball itself. They tend to unite the spectator and the player, giving the customer in the stands a personal touch with the man who plays the game on the field. The game of baseball would, undoubtedly, thrive without the nickname; but it would lack much of the tremendous amount of color it now holds.

There are many ways in which a player may acquire a nickname. Perhaps there is something about his build or features that bounces about his familiar title. It may have been his style of play in the field and on the bases, or his stance at the plate. Then, also, his name may have been shortened or abbreviated in some way. However nearly all veteran players have nicknames of some description and it is the object of this story to tell how a few of them were acquired.

Everyone who has ever heard of baseball has heard of Babe Ruth. The name Babe has been so deeply set into the annals of baseball, that it probably will never be forgotten. A number of stories have been told about Ruth and how he first came to be called Babe. The big outfielder himself, however, says that the name dates back to the early days of his youth. He was a rather slight scrawny boy when first attending St. Mary's School in Baltimore and because of this, his playmates did not treat him as well as they would at the present time. Therefore, he did considerable crying so they called him Babe.

Earl J. Adams came into the big leagues known by his friends as "Babli". This name stuck for some time, but one day it was changed, and Adams himself explains why. "Babli Maraville" gave me that name back in 1925 when he became manager of the Cubs. The very first day out in a Chicago uniform he said to me, "Say, Babli, we can't have two Bablis on this ball club and as I'm older than you, I'm going to remain as Babli. From now on you'll be something else. Now let's see, I know. You're a regular scamp plus in that field, from now on you're Babli." Several nicknames have been attached to Henry L. Gehrig. Perhaps the most prominent is Lou, but he also answers to the names of Hunter and Columbia Lou. The Lou is short for his middle name, which is Louis and the Columbia was added to the Lou because he attended Columbia University before turning to big league baseball. Babe Ruth tried to get the name to call Gehrig Hunter. That title has almost been forgotten, however, but it does spring up once in a while on the field and in the clubhouse.

Back in 1922 a big right handed pitcher with all kinds of speed suddenly sprang into the spotlight with the Brooklyn club. He was known as Dizzy Vance. Many believe that the name Dizzy came as a result of his terrific speed, but such is not the case, according to Vance himself. "During my younger days out in Hastings, Neb. there was a well known character on the outskirts of the town who was a cowboy. He had everything that goes to make a cowboy—a moustache, a mustache, and so forth. And everything he had he called it daisy. I visited him quite often, and after a while I picked up the expression. Anything I liked would call a daisy. After a while the boys began to call me Dizzy and the name has stuck."

Vance's team mates also call him Dazzler and that undoubtedly because of his fast ball. Harold Traynor, the best third baseman in the National League, is known everywhere as Pie. This nickname dates back to his early days at school, where he developed as an unusual foodster for the Frankie Frisch of the St. Louis Cardinals, and a great second baseman is called the Porcelain Flash when not answering to the name of Frankie. Frisch attended Fordham College as a youth, where he starred in baseball and football. When he came into the majors he almost immediately became the Porcelain Flash.

Leo Hartnett, Chicago's big catcher, acquired the title of Gabby because of his endless line of chatter behind the plate. Muley Inoué did into a puddle of mud one day in a sandlot game and the name Muddy at once became his title. This name seems rather odd, for Inoué is one of the neatest, most

HEARD ON THE STREET

"I wish our bank could get on its feet enough to stop sending back our cheques," started "No Funder," said the little to her husband. "A bank that hasn't got enough money on hand to pay a $4.27 cheque ought to be moved out on a round house!"

Victor—Who are they spending on now?

Nurse—A man who swallowed a conch shell golf ball.

Victor—And who is the man who is waiting so impatiently out side?

Nurse—Oh, that is the death man that lost the ball.

Professor—Well, not one or two things about John Milton.

Plebe—Well he got married and he wrote "Paradise Lost".

Editor—What's that he wrote "Paradise Regained"?

Installation Collector—See how I can get several installations on your place.

Purchaser—Well the company advises, "Pay as you go."

Editor—What's that he said with it?

Purchaser—I play very poorly.

Scotty Sergeant—And now we'll try to right turn by numbers, and mind that you don't move till you hear the final syllable of the word "right!"

George Haas of the Athletics somewhat because Mule back in his boyhood days and it has stayed right with him. Hazen Cuyler answered to the name of Kl when he first began playing organized baseball, the expression being taken from the beginning of his last name. Later, his team mates added to it and now he is Klut. Another Cub, Woody English, became Woody on the diamond because his name, which is Edward, was much too complicated to yell.

Many of the Stars have quite unique names which never do reach the fan. For instance, Dale Gribble quite often is called Jolter by some of the Yankees, probably a title taken from his first name, George.

Walter Johnson, the one who knew him, was barely to his team mates one could easily write a book telling the history of the familiar names attached to the son of the nation's athletes of the major. Each year, as long as the game is played, youth will replace the veterans and that youth will have a new name. Nicknames add color to the player as an individual and the game as a whole. Baseball stands more color and so, can give every sport.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER CROP PRICE GUARANTY

Take advantage of this offer . . . Get the new equipment you need to reduce your production costs

Many farmers who need new machines for the economical production of their crops have been reluctant to buy them because of uncertainty as to the prices they will receive later in the year for these farm products.

In order to meet this situation, the International Harvester Company of Canada, Ltd., offers to farmers purchasing machines after this date, a definite price guaranty on wheat based on 77 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern at Winnipeg, applying to a liberal portion of the purchase price of the machine. If the market price for wheat does not reach the guaranteed price at the time payment becomes due on notes given and maturing this year, the purchaser of machines under the plan will receive a credit equal to the difference.

Any farmer in Canada, regardless of where he lives or what he raises, can purchase McCormick-Deering farm machines under the terms of this offer.

This is your chance to replace wornout and obsolete equipment on a favorable price basis. Let us explain the details of this remarkable plan and tell you just how to take advantage of it in equipping your farm with the new cost-reducing machines you need at a real saving.

PUBLIC PREFERENCE IS THE BEST PROOF OF VALUE

MORE people are buying CHEVROLET SIXES than ANY other car because Chevrolet gives more for the money

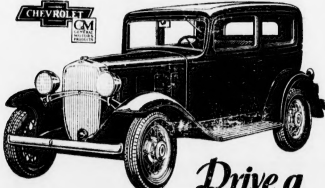

The new Chevrolet became Canada's largest selling automobile because it offered the public outstanding value in a low priced car. Today, Chevrolet is maintaining its lead in sales—because, with prices reduced and quality unchanged, Chevrolet has increased its lead in value. For the first four months of 1932, Chevrolet has outsold the next leading car more than two-to-one.

Drive a Chevrolet—how much more it offers than you can find elsewhere in the lowest price field. Smooth styling—Chevrolet emulates the modern lines and modish fittings of expensive custom cars. Finer construction—for Chevrolet, alone in its field, has bodies by Fisher, with their lasting, quiet hardwood-and-steel construction. More advanced features—because of Chevrolet's Free Wheeling, silent Synchro-Mesh gear shifting and many other up-to-date advantages. A more economical engine—because with its built-in smoothness, its speed and acceleration, the Chevrolet six-cylinder power plant costs less to operate than any other automobile engine of comparable size and power. A more thoroughly proved product—because no other 1932 motor car is backed by the satisfactory road-experience of so many thousands of owners.

A Greater Value than Ever—because you can enjoy all these advantages today in any of thirteen big, quality models—at reduced prices—and on small payments spread over a period of months.

HUDSON BAY INSURANCE RATES

The Montreal Gazette will have it that the Free Press insists upon the Dominion treasury paying insurance rates upon vessels using the Hudson Bay route in order to give Churchill an unfair advantage as an alternative port to Montreal. It is of course, the "Eastern taxpayer," according to the Gazette, who will do the paying. The Gazette has not yet discovered that there are Western taxpayers who have had the happiness in many years of making contributions to the many millions that have been spent in turning a five foot narrow Montreal into a seven sea port. In view of Montreal's dependence upon large and continuous expenditures its longish attitude towards every outlet looking to the development of other ports is very reckless. It is in view of this and some day, unless Montreal needs a new way, this will be forthcoming.

There is of course no proposal that, once the insurance risks that properly go with the Hudson Bay route are determined, any public assistance should be given toward paying these rates. It has simply been suggested that the Dominion Government should itself take the necessary steps to determine what are the risks of the route—a not unreasonable request in view of the public investment in this new national transportation channel.

There is no confidence through out the West that the underwriters' combination in London will insist a period of 25 years, fix in advance rates in keeping with conditions. Their historic record of determined hostility to Canadian ports in the interests of United States ports is well known in these parts; and there is no intention to let them fix rates for the new route if any means can be found to avoid it. The fact that last year the grain boats which came to Churchill had to pay insurance rates five or six times as high as the rates to Montreal is the measure of the capacity of the underwriters to determine the possibilities of new routes. "Here's a new route, let's look it up," appears to be their motto. Nor is there any confidence in that pretensions facility, the Imperial Shipping Board.

The Dominion Government might very properly ask the marine insurance companies for a period of one month to supply a rate—three years, perhaps five—to charge rates to Churchill identical with Montreal, guaranteeing them against loss. At the end of this period the rates could be fixed.

ed to meet the conditions established by the test; and these rates of course would have to be met by the insurance passing through the bay and strait. Believers in the new route would welcome a comparison of the rates for the Lawrence in the confidence that it would be found superior in every respect.

A HOME AND A PLOT OF GROUND

We are learning that one of the important things in human life is security says the Boston Monitor. Modern industry, with all its advantages, has made life more insecure for its employees. They are crowded into congested cities and live in rented apartments, with no other feeling but an uncertain weekly pay envelope to stand between them and want.

Henry Ford would change all that by moving industry to the country, where the workers can own a home and a plot of ground and raise part of their food. That is not a new idea, but it is a new one. And Mr. Ford has proven its practicability in several industrial villages. Moreover, present conditions characterize its importance. It is just as important to nations as to individuals. If we are to have sound, stable nations that can face the future with confidence, the worker must be made more secure.

Whether industries are large or small, they are better off away from congested cities, where racketeering, graft and high overheads make their existence difficult. Most important of all, the decentralization of industry will give the factory workers a chance to own a home and a plot of ground, and to live and retain their independence even if the factory does shut down now and then.

Of course, any farm and factory plan to be seriously useful must not be merely a device for permitting an employer to pay lower wages which could be supplemented by grafting. It stability is to be assured, wages must be high enough to buy the goods produced. Production of goods must be maintained by production of buying power. Otherwise, there will be recurrent "overproduction," which is only another way of saying shortage of purchasing power.

No such system will release employer, employee and community from the obligation to strive by every means to stabilize industry. The farm and factory plan is only one avenue for such striving.

It is, perhaps, the most hopeful. Such a movement may compete with some specialized branches of farming, but that will be more than offset by the advantages resulting from the greater stability of industry and the greater security of workers, thus creating a steadier demand for farm products. This will be especially true if, as Mr. Ford believes, industry eventually takes most of its raw materials from the farm.

There will be the advantage to the farmer, too, of having his customers closer at hand, and of having factories in the community that in certain seasons will offer spare time work to him and his family. The better understanding that will come from a mingling of agriculture and industry will be an advantage politically. Exploitation of a stable, home owning population is difficult. Working people living under neutral conditions will make, together with farmers, a background of stable, independent voters, which is the best assurance of good government. The social advantage of the farm over the slum are obvious.

There is not overly much to be said for large cities. The only reason we have piled millions of people together to lead an unhealthful and for most of them—insane life in large cities is that only recently have we had the transportation and the distribution of goods that makes it possible for us to spread out. There is now little reason why millions of people should crowd into one city. Today's power is not bound to the mine or waterfront, but travels afield. Good roads, air routes, telephones have linked the business centers closely. Motors, radio and motion pictures have put many of the city's attractions into the home and hamlet.

The desire for a home and a plot of ground runs deep in most men. Human life will be pleasanter and more secure, and civilization will be safer, if we make it possible for more people to satisfy that desire. Independence and individual opportunity are not only for the favored few. They are a birthright which can be restored to the workers by giving them room.

SAME OLD PITCHING ARM BUT SCRIBES FIN PROVE DIFFERENT PERSONALITY

Chicago—Not since the land some De Juggly's potent brew got the best of him, has any man managed such a startling metamorphosis as that accomplished by Robert Moses Grove during the month between the end of the 1931 baseball season and the beginning of the 1932 year.

This time last year, Robert Moses who is known to the trade as Lefty, was just about the oriest cuss in baseball. No, he was the oriest cuss. You couldn't talk to him for fear of getting bitten. When he wasn't out there in the middle of the lawn pitching, the man home-wounded around with a look on his scowling jaw that said better than words. "Keep out posted no trespassing and advance at your own risk."

New ladies, and gentlemen, get a load of the 1932 Grove. Why, he is just about the sweetest character you ever knew. He smiles, greets strangers with a cheery "Hello," and wonder of wonders actually welcomes interviewers who seek his opinion on such pressing matters as the "future of the fast ball," and "is it true the Athletics aren't a happy, happy family?"

Last year he greeted interviewers with aloof that would freeze first class gin and such encouraging remarks, "Now, I ain't got nothing to say, and 'What the hell are you picking on me for?'"

Naturally there have been dozens of reasons advanced for such a change in attitude. They range from a change in diet to a vision Lefty had one night after he had frightened a waitress by leaving a dime up.

The most logical explanation, however, has to do with the Little Philadelphia sport writers. When Lefty arrived at the spring training camp he was the same large and overwhelming pain. And the correspondents due to their trust, recorded same for their papers.

One batch of papers, it seemed, contained a bumper crop of complimentary remarks about their own southpaw. Armed with these one of Lefty's friends cornered him, read the despatches, and pointed out the errors of his way.

Lefty agreed with his friend and promised to be human. It was a hard task at first, but he applied himself diligently, and suddenly was his. Now he can walk down the street without a single mother (read that right please) grabbing her child and saying "Come here, Oscar. Here comes that terrible Grove man."

How about some nice horseshit said the grower to the hie.

Oh, no, indeed; we keep a car.
